Wow didnt realize the CO2 focus v everything else
- 13:26:03 From Analisa Winther to Everyone:
What does reductionist mean?
- 13:29:23 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:
Trying to understand how an engine works by taking it apart and understanding how each individual part works, but forgetting to put back the engine to also understand how the work parts together in relation to each other
- 13:31:07 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:
yep, scope 3 emissions
- 13:31:22 From 0-Universidad para la Cooperación Internacional to Everyone:
Reductionism is an oversimplification. It refers to the fact that the concepts of one field of research can and should be reduced to those of another field with a lower level of complexity. On the contrary, under the regenerative approach, complex problems are addressed holistically, understanding the whole, not in silos.
- 13:42:14 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:
I'll add human behavior and wealth inequality to those grand challenges

14:02:10 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

can we also get the source for alzheimers and autism's relationship with gut bacteria?

14:15:47 From Deepa Mirchandani to Everyone:

We found at Catalyst 2030 that funders are more likely to support collaboration projects rather than the organisation / operational costs for the secretariat dedicated for systems change..

14:16:23 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

Which kind of funders? Public, private?

14:16:56 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

Replying to "We found at Catalyst..."

also that question for you 😊 v

Grant funders. The incubation phase was funded by Ashoka, Skoll, Schwab, Echoing Green but after that it's been harder to sell the idea of systems change and funding the emergent global distributed network. There's been some funding from corporate foundations so far.

14:20:52 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

are there jobs available in these regen networks 😊

14:21:21 From Zaki Raheem to Everyone:

From an entrepreneurship lens, are you hopeful of the growth of private equity / venture capital funding into cleantech & climatetech startups - or is funding focusing on scaling up the wrong solutions?

14:22:43 From Estefania Pretelt to Everyone:

As you mention everything starts with ourselves. What little day to day actions would you recommend to do, to live more aligned with Mother Earth and start are own regeneration?

14:24:05 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

Replying to "From an entrepreneur..."

I think technooptimism is a dangerous narrative to fund when the roots of these major global issues are in our civilization's anthropocentric values that trickle down to become degenerative and unsustainable behaviors

14:25:41 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

that;s a sad story

14:26:55 From Stefan Fiedler to Everyone:

what's the company?

14:27:28 From Gutierrez Laurent to Everyone:

Technology is all fine as far as it does not interfere with the processes of nature - appropriate technologies.

14:28:24 From Analisa Winther to Everyone:

What was the name of that agreement?

14:28:53 From Obed Azofeifa to Everyone:

Are there any countries that use the concept of planetary boundaries as a foundation for making development decisions?

I find that going for a walk everyday without music does wonders. Just listening to nature, being with myself, and processing. Also taking time to walk slow and really appreciate and notice all life around me

14:33:15 From Estefania Pretelt to Everyone:

Thank you ❤️

Are there any countries that use the concept of planetary boundaries as a foundation for making development decisions?

14:34:20 From Analisa Winther to Everyone:

What was the name of the agreement for releasing new tech?

14:34:41 From Analisa Winther to Everyone:

Did anyone catch that? "Do not apply tech unless you're sure it will do no harm"

14:35:14 From Eduard Müller to Everyone:
